STRUCK AND KILLED BY ST. CAR

Mrs. John Bushfield of Oak Lawn Meets Tragic Death

Tragedy has stalked on the trail of a number of Oak Lawn residents since the New Year was ushered and the village was again thrown into mourning last Thursday evening when Mrs. John Bushfield, wife of the well known Oak Lawn Lunchroom man, was struck and instantly killed by a street car at 95th and Vincennes. Mrs. Bushfield and her little daughter were on their way to attend a performance at the Capitol Theatre and while crossing the street, Mrs. Bushfield saw an auto coming from the north and in trying to get out of the way of the approaching car, she stepped onto the street car tracks directly in front of an swiftly moving street car. The motorman was unable to stop and the car struck her, killing her almost instantly, nearly every bone in her body being broken. The little girl was slightly bruised and cut but escaped injury.

Mrs. Bushfield's body was taken to the morgue at 99th and Throop streets and later removed to the Brumm undertaking rooms. When the news of the tragedy reached Oak Lawn, every one was deeply shocked and grieved and men in the streets burst into tears. Mrs. Bushfield has made her home in Oak Lawn for 21 years and was highly respected by the entire community.

Lillian Annette Bushfield was raised by Mayor John Emery and his family from a little girl up until she was married to Mr. John Bushfield, of Chambersburg, Ill., on Aug. 3rd, 1918. About seven years ago their first child died and was buried on May 31st and by a strange kink of fate, the mother was buried on the same date 7 years later.

Mr. and Mrs. Bushfield have been actively engaged in the lunch room business in Oak Lawn for the past two years and worked up a very nice patronage.

Funeral services were held from the John Emery home where the deceased had spent most of her life, on Monday afternoon, May 31st with the Rev. Mr. Brockhaus of the Trinity Lutheran church officiating. Hundreds of people attended the final rites and the floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. Burial took place on the Inghram lot in Mount Hope cemetery.

The deceased is survived by her deeply sorrowing husband, little daughter, a brother and a host of friends. She attained the age of thirty years.

The heartfelt sympathy of the entire community goes out to the afflicted family in the hour of sore bereavement.

Miss Creta Bixler Weds Geo. Keuch

On Saturday evening at 5:30 o'clock, a beautiful wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bixler of Alpine, when their daughter, Creta, became the bride of George Keuch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Keuch of Tinley Park. The wedding ceremony was read by the Rev. W.J. Cramer pastor of St. John Evangelical church of Mokena, the double ring ceremony being used.

The bride had as her attendants Miss Clara Keuch, sister of the groom as bridesmaid, and her two small sisters, Rosina, as flower girl and Alma May, as ring bearer.

Miss Keuch was lovely in green crepe de chine while the ring bearer and flower girl wore pink crepe de chine, carrying out the color scheme of pink, green and white.

The bride looked lovely in white crepe de chine and wearing the customary bridal veil.

Mr. Erwin Bixler acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served to the immediate families and a few intimate friends.

The newlyweds will locate on a farm near Tinley Park.

FISH SEINERS HEAVILY FINED

Hickory Creek has been a sort of Mecca for fish seiners for a long time, but last Sunday a crowd of six foreigners ran amuck of the strong arm of the law and had to pay dearly for their sport.

About nine o'clock Sunday morning, six men were seen engaged in seining Hickory Creek near the Arthur Geuther farm southeast of Mokena. Deputy John Frisch of Mokena was notified and swooped down on the unsuspecting fishermen. They were placed under arrest and brought them to Mokena and locked up in the village jail until their trial came off in the afternoon. When arrested, they were using a 30 foot net with inch mesh and had one big and four under sized black bass, six suckers and some carp.

The case came up before Judge John F. Schultz who found four of the fishermen guilty of seining and fined each one $50 and costs, making a total of $226.88. The men finally gave their names as Felix Nicola, Peter Clarino, Joseph Gil-lono and John Antonitte. The two other fishermen, John Goretto and John Jiacitone were charged with trespassing and were each assessed a fine of $3 and costs making a total of $19.44. The four seiners did not have enough money with them to pay their fines, so they were locked up until Goretto and Jiacitone went back home and got the money and paid it over to Judge Schultz, following which they were released. They were all from Indiana Avenue in Roseland.

Deputy Frisch was paid $110 as his share of the fines collected.

Sheep Deal Is Aired In Court

A deal in sheep last week brought two well known Mokena farmers into court Tuesday, as the result of a dispute over the sale of said sheep. Last week Fred Cappel made a deal with Hirsch Bros., for 20 ewes and a ram. A price was agreed on of 9c a pound but no money was paid down. After this deal had been made another party from Chicago sought to buy the entire herd of 90 head of sheep among which were the 20 head Cappel had dickered for. The Chicago buyer said he would only buy the entire 90 and if he could not have all of them he would not buy any. As no money had been paid down Hirsch Bros., decided to sell the 90 head to the Chicago man.

When Mr. Cappel called at the Hirsch farm Tuesday morning to get his sheep, Hirsch Bros., refused to let him have them. Mr. Cappel contended that a bargain was a bargain whether any money had been paid down or not and forthwith went to Police Magistrate, John F. Schultz and had a writ of replevin issued for the 20 ewes and the ram.

Judge Schultz set the case for hearing in the village hall in Mokena for 1:30 Tuesday afternoon. At the time set the case opened with Attorney Edward Nadlehofer of Joliet representing Mr. Cappel and attorney John Savage of the same city counsel for Hirsch Bros.

After the case was called for trial and Mr. Cappel had shown that it had been agreed upon that he was to have his pick out of the herd of 90 head Hirsch Bros., swore in open court that they did

The Mummy and the Mumps.

On June 7th at 8:15 P.M. in the basement of the St. John Evangelical church will be given the school play "The Mummy and the Mumps." This is a three act farce, sparkling in comedy. There is no feature part, each one of the participants having a wealth of opportunity to shine. The play has for a foundation the discovery of the mummy of the late King Tut. Sir Hector, a vow at foreign languages, has become famous through his discovery of the mummy of Queen O-zo-el-man-deb. There have been several inducements offered him to prolong his stay in this country, among them being an offer of the chair of languages at the exclusive girls' school at Fenella. Upon his arrival in this country he is held in quarantine at Ellis Island on account of his having a very severe case of the mumps. He manages to slip away and visits the school but to his utter surprise he finds that there is a mummy already on the job. How matters are finally straightened out forms a plot both interesting and full of fun for everyone. This play will start the festivities for graduation week. The program for that week is as follows: Monday June 7—school play, Thursday night, at St. John's church, 7:45 P.M., graduation exercises for the High school, the Eighth grade of the Mokena Public schools and also the Eighth grade of the Summit school; Friday report cards will be given and the year's work brought to a close.

Abolition of War Next Big Problem Says Rev. Putnam

The Mokena Memorial Day services were held Monday afternoon in the basement of St. John Evan. church and were well attended. Rev. Mr. Putnam of the Richard street M.E. church, Joliet, was the speaker of the day. He pointed out the great heroes of our forefathers from the time of the early colonial fathers up to the Civil war. He showed that in our present day we have three great problems to solve namely, the abolition of war, race hatred and strife between capital and labor. He made a not feel that Judge Schultz would give them a fair and square deal and asked for a change of venue to the court of W.C. Owen which was granted. Later the case was dismissed and Mr. Cappel got his sheep.

Eight students of the 8th grade graduated. They are: Harold Lorenz, Jack Swisher, Lawrence Lucht, Edwin Meyer, John Devlin, Anna Miller, Dorothy Goebel, Hilma Hopman and Dorothy Nielsen.

The graduates occupied special chairs, each chair being decorated with a sash bearing the initials of the student.

strong plea for the outlawing of war by all nations.

Wm. Semmler read the roll call of the soldiers buried in the several cemeteries around Mokena.

In his address Rev. Mr. Putnam also paid tribute to Editors, for the work they have and are doing in their communities and for the nation. He showed how William Lloyd Garrison, famous abolition editor of Boston co-operated with Henry Ward Beecher, John Wendell Phillips and Harriett Beecher Stowe in starting the movement that led finally to the Civil War and ending of slavery.

A mixed quartette composed of Erhard Oswald, Leon Tonn, Miss Freida Zumstein and Mrs. Mable Mall sang, "The Boys of the Old Brigade" and "Tenting on the Old Camp Grounds."

Rev. Glen T. Beaty, pastor of the Mokena M.E. Church offered the invocation and Rev. W.J. Cramer, pastor of St. John church and chairman of the day, offered the closing prayer and benediction. At the close of the program the Girl Scouts decorated the soldiers graves in the three cemeteries.

Mrs. Rose Moriarty was re-elected chairman of the Memorial Day committee for next year.

A Memorial Day Thought

(Owing to a heavy run of advertising and news matter, we were obliged to omit much material from our columns last week. Tho a trifle late, yet we find the following article on Memorial Day by Rev. Otto C. Frey of the Green Garden M.E. church so good that we take pleasure in printing it this week. Editor.)

"The gospel exalts patriotism to a Christian virtue whenever it is held in a Christian spirit. It is one of the happy facts that our Memorial day acts so strongly in the direction of keeping this higher form of patriotism alive. Is there no lesson of loyalty to God and native land when our rising generations are told of men like Commodore Perry, before his battles placing the American flag on the capstan of his ship, and the Bible on the flag, and then with his men gathered round him, singing together the Old Hundredth Psalm? Or of Nathan Coffin, urged and threatened to induce him to enlist with his nation's enemies, replying 'Hang me if you will to the yard arm of your ship, but do not ask me to become a traitor to my country!' Or of General Reed, of the Revolution, offered $50,000 as a bribe, replying: 'Gentlemen, I am poor, very poor, but your king is not rich enough to buy me!'

It means something for God, as well as for home and native land when we see such unselfish devotion as was displayed by our men of the Revolution, and of the Civil War, the men of Santiago, the hero of Manila Bay, or of later days in the World War.

Christian Patriotism—this is what our people learn and find strengthened by the observance of each recurring Memorial Day, a patriotism which is opposed to selfishness, and all self-seeking which reproves all anarchy and disorder, which denounces every attempt to plunder the treasury by turning public office into a way of serving only private ends. These things and others like them, do not grow in the same soil, they do not live in the same heart with Christianity and patriotism.

Our Memorial day teaches also the value of peace. It shows war at best a necessary evil to be justified only by a righteous cause. It shows the cost of war. What the Civil War cost us in dollars and cents some day may be wiped out and forgotten, but that it cost us hundreds of thousands of precious lives will never be forgotten while Memorial day continues to be observed. At a great price of blood—the blood of a nation's heroes, whose memories we honor. Nor will they soon be forgotten, for "On Fame's eternal camping ground

She had difficulty in adjusting some twigs of the hedge to her liking, and her voice was so low I could scarcely hear it as she said:

"I told you once that should you feel the same as you did that time on the river—that second time on the second river—there could be no harm— Ah, I put shame on myself to speak more."

"And I repeat I am a very foolish man and must have love where I love," I stammered.

"Such a hard man!" she sighed, with a quick uplift of her eyes; and I could swear she was laughing at me.

"You brought me here to have me propose marriage to you?" I bluntly demanded.

"It is shameful to make me say that. But it is true," she mumbled.

Even then I feared she was sacrificing herself to me because of some absurd sense of gratitude.

"But your pride—"

"Enough of that word!" she fiercely cried, clutching both my hands and turning eyes filled with tears for my inspection. Then humbly:

"Does monsieur find pride in me now? Or does he find a poor, homeless, homesick girl with no friends, no people?"

My arms would have closed about her slim form had she not had a second thought. Withdrawing from me and holding her head high and haughty she accused me:

"You dared to think wrong of me on that island off Biloxi! You dared to think weakness of me because I came on that terrible ship! Not a word, monsieur! I will listen to no defense!"

As poor Joe Labrador would have said, "Ah, that Mademoiselle Dahls-gaarde!" In her moods she was as irresponsible as a butterfly, and as irresponsible as a sunbeam. I lied bravely and sternly, and severely lectured her for presuming to read my thoughts and then to convict me on whatever conclusions she might happen to form. The rigidity of her pose gradually relaxed while I talked. By the time I had finished a discourse on the evilness of "pride" she was quite limp. And when for the third time I asked her to marry me, she did not refuse.

Our wedding was two weeks old and I was still as ardent a believer in fairytales as any Frenchman. Then my host demanded my attention, and informed me that the man who was so insistent on seeing Mrs. Brampton was again calling.

"I believe the fellow must be crazy, William, but it's for you to dispose of him. He bothered her some before you came."

I vowed I would scalp him, and directed the butler to bring him into the rose-garden back of the house. He came, and behold he was the man who had yelled to me as I furiously galloped up the plantation road in search of a wife. What was more astonishing he was Jules Mattor, my boatman when I escaped from Pascagoula bay.

I sternly inquired his business with Mrs. Brampton, and with much squirming and twisting, he told me how he had brought her a message from Biloxi, it being written by no one less than his excellency, Sieur de Bienville.

"And, monsieur, I have waited six weeks, and she will give me no answer to carry back. If I go without an answer his excellency will believe I did not do his business, and he will use a hard hand. Mademoiselle would not give me an answer. Cannot monsieur, who is so big and strong, induce madame to write just a word?"

I sent a boy to fetch Mrs. Brampton. As she entered the garden and beheld Mattor she smiled slightly, but there was nothing but happiness in her face.

"Madame, this man, Jules Mattor, says he brought you a message from Sieur de Bienville and fears he will be punished if he returns without an answer."

"So?" she softly answered. "Then he should have an answer. And has monsieur, my husband, been told what the message contained?"

"I doubt if the messenger knows. I certainly have not asked him."

I turned aside and became interested in a rosebush. With a swish of skirts she was at my side and explaining:

"They found out directly after I sailed. Word came by the very boat which followed the Maitre, the very boat Bienville went out to the island to meet that night you escaped from Biloxi. Think of it! That very night Bienville had his orders from my uncle, the marquis, and if you had been a day late they would have bundled me back to France and you would have no little wife to make you happy this day."

I gaped at her stupidly and muttered:

"The trail is very blind, madame. I find a sign here and there."

"Foolish one! I knew it would come in time. That was why I was determined to marry you before you learned the truth."

"Aye? Well, you did it."

"Because I feared that once you learned the truth your silly English pride would send you back to the terrible forest and that abominable river, and I would return to France, or stay here unwed. Here is the message. Read it."

She pulled a paper from the bosom of her gown, but I refused it, suggesting that she tell me what she would. She settled herself primly on a rustic settee and made an imperious little gesture for me to be seated.

"It is like this, my love. My mother was a de Baude, a distant kinswoman of Comte de Frontenac—"

"Pride!" I exclaimed, beginning to understand.

"Her family would have none of her because she married a Dahls-gaarde. After both she and my father died an uncle was named as my guardian. He is a friend of Monsieur le Regent, and being a marquis and having great wealth, he is a very sad dog. His tastes and Monsieur le Regent's are the same. The two plan to marry me to an execrable creature, who has much gold, a great family name, and the morals of the devil. I refuse to marry the beast. Terrible times follow. I am fresh from the convent. I know little of the world. I am terrified when my uncle, the marquis, says it is the regent's will that I marry his choice at once. They bring the man to me.

"You Brought Me Here to Have Me Propose Marriage to You?" I Bluntly Demanded.

"He is hideous, and old enough to be my father. I swear I will not wed him. My uncle the marquis, says I shall. I am nearly insane. But there are wonderful stories being told about the Mississippi country. Every one is making a mountain of gold just by buying John L'as' stock. The very servants gossip about the magic of Louisiana. Every one is kind. There is nothing but happiness. The day draws nearer the hateful wedding. I can kill myself, yes; but life is young; life is sweet if not poisoned."

"I dress in a maid's gown and take a few of my jewels and escaped to the coast. The day I reached the port I learn an immigrant ship is about to sail. I go aboard just as they are about to start. Ah, such women-wolves were in it! Then that island and Biloxi! Then that odious la Nouvelle Orleans—the second Paris! I was crazed with fear and horror, monsieur. So I wrote to you. That is all."

Unhappiness in Wake of Avoidable Worry

The thing which causes us to worry is either something that can be remedied, or can't. The thing to do is to look it squarely in the face. Swallow an unpleasant truth or so if necessary, but get down to the issue, is the advice of the Montreal Family Herald.

If the cause cannot be changed, there is only one thing to do—don't think about it. Force yourself to shut it out of your consciousness. Just close your mind to it, and let the bow fall when and where it will. Since you can't stop it, you might at least save your strength for the finish.

But most of our worries are avoidable. We worry because we suddenly think, two hours after we left the house, that we maybe didn't turn off

This Name of Poet

So then, gentlemen, in the eyes of men of your refinement, I would have this name of poet to be regarded as sacred: it is a name to which barbarism never yet did violence. Rocks and wilderness echo the voice; savage brutes are often swayed by melody and stand stock-still; are we, whose education has been of the highest—are we not to be touched by the accents of a poet?—Cicero.

"Very good. I am glad it is cleared up. Nothing from those experiences can ever come into your life to make you sad."

She rose and asked:

"Are there no questions, my dear?"

"No questions, sweetheart."

She glanced down at the letter and laughed aloud as a child does when immensely pleased.

"Ciel! But I forgot Sieur de Bienville's letter! I have told you nothing of it. I must have no secrets from my husband. It seems his orders are to place me on the first ship returning to France. He is much concerned to have me go back. Monsieur le Regent is vastly interested; and that means Monseigneur L'as will do anything to get me back."

"D—n them all! All France can't get you back!" I cried.

"O-o-o!" and she drew back in a pantomime of fear. "Such terrible words my husband speaks! But his excellency writes most polite. He the same as says I shall dictate my own future. A ship will take me from Charles Town, or Pensacola, as I wish. It is arranged with the English government that I may go in an English ship, if I wish. I am warned not to return by way of the river, as it would be too dangerous. You should feel very proud to find me a woman of so much importance. Now you know all. Will you keep me?"

"Against all Europe!" I told the top of her head.

She struggled free and cried:

"But you never ask about the old pirate. Such a polite husband! I know you die of curiosity. He was an undergardener at my uncle's country place. He saw me steal away from home, and he followed me. He was a very wicked old man. He followed me on board the ship, planning to make a fortune out of my disappearance. He knew there would be a great search and a big sum in gold offered. He would wait in the new world till he could drive the best bargain; then he would betray me. He was very wicked."

It was all told. I felt humble and meek, but took care it should not show. So I urged her to get rid of Mattor by sending an answer to Bienville.

"Madame, as your wife I think it would be better to let Mr. Brampton write the answer," she replied. "Else why did I keep this poor man waiting until you came here and married me?"

We've traveled far together since those old brave days, and many of the myths have been killed out of the valley. A miracle she never wears of contemplating is our twin boys. I called them English and she flared up and declared them to be French, and before I could join the issue she was in tears, and saying they were neither French nor English, but were Americans. And so she brought them up to consider themselves. A second miracle she could scarcely comprehend was their astounding growth until they were my equal in stature. And her pride! It towered above all other pride she had ever felt, as the heavens overtop an ant-hill. Their obedience and reverence when with their mother was very beautiful for me to watch. As they became Americans and carried her along with them I ceased calling myself English; for one must go with one's folks, or else feel very lonely.

Narbonne and Labrador; Six Fingers and Darnoon the Fox. The good and the bad. Yet somehow the mighty river utilized both elements to give me my wife. And I wonder if its other seemingly blind purposes may not contain some hidden good for those who ultimately build cabins in the valley.

the electric iron in the kitchen, or because we have a house full of company in the evening and nothing seems ready, or because the children won't eat their vegetables, but will fill up on candy, or any number of small things that are the result of our own carelessness or our inattention to duty.

Many Kinds of Oaks

There are 300 kinds of oak trees having vastly different characteristics, but they have one common feature, and that is they all produce acorns. The white oak is so called because it has a rather white bark, while the black oak's bark is quite dark, black to all intents and purposes during the "wood age." Live oak was always preferred for shipbuilding and for heavy duty, but just why it was named "live" is a matter of doubt.

At one time the island of Nantucket was covered with live oaks, but the land was denuded of this timber years ago during the whaling activities, when several shipbuilding yards flourished on the island and a great fleet of whalers was built there.

Forest fires last year burned over 30,000,000 acres of ground—an area greater than that of New England.

Buried With Honors of War

THE career of Capt. John Halsey is unique in that he not only died in bed—not "with his boots on," as so many pirates did, but that he was given honors of war when buried.

Halsey began as a privateer off the Newfoundland banks under a commission from the governor of Massachusetts, but no sooner was he out of sight of land than he turned pirate. After capturing a few fishing vessels he sailed for the Canary Islands, where pirating promised to be more lucrative. After capturing a Spanish vessel near the Canaries he sailed around the Cape of Good Hope for a visit with the pirates in Madagascar.

In the Red Sea he overhauled a fine Dutch ship armed with 60 guns, then by some strange quirk of conscience decided that thereafter he would leave the shipping of Christian nations alone and prey upon Moorish shipping only. His crew became angry at his announcement to this effect, mutinied, and threw him into irons. Then they attacked the Hollander, but were being roundly thrashed when they released Halsey, who got the ship away safely.

For several weeks thereafter Halsey scoured the seas in search of Moslem vessels, but luck was against him. So he gave up his resolve and attacked the British ships, the Essex and the Rising Eagle. From the Essex the pirates took more than 50,000 pounds in English gold, and from the other, more than 10,000. Upon discovering that the captain of the Essex was an old friend of his quartermaster, Halsey returned all of the captain's personal belongings, but kept the 50,000 pounds!

Halsey was something of a business man as well as a pirate. After the capture of these two vessels he made out invoices and sold the two ships back to their owners for cash! Then he returned to Madagascar where he was visited by the captain of the Scotch ship, Neptune, which had come to trade in rum with the pirates. This visit was providential for the pirate leader. A hurricane destroyed his ships, and he immediately seized the Scotch vessel. Then he attacked and seized another ship filled with merchandise which the pirates had just sold to its captain and for which they had received their pay.

Captain Halsey died of a tropical fever in 1716. From a contemporary the following account of his funeral is taken: "With great solemnity, the prayers of the Church of England being read over him, and his sword and pistols laid on his coffin, which was covered with a ship's Jack. As many minute guns were fired as he was old, viz: 46, and three English volleys and one French volley of small arms. His grave was made in a garden of watermelons and fenced in to prevent his being rooted up by wild pigs." Great honor, indeed, for a ruthless sea rover! And what a touching thought that last sentence!

"Piracy Without Tears"

IN ALL history of piracy there is no more amazing figure than that of Captain Misson, the founder of "piracy without tears." Instead of a black flag, he sailed under a white flag; he pillaged with an apology; he founded a piratical Utopia which failed through no fault of his and finally he died as had many an honest seafarer, lost at sea in a storm.

Misson came of an ancient French family in Provence and was well educated. Reading books of travel gave him a desire to see the far corners of the earth and during a visit in Rome he made an acquaintance which changed his whole career. This was Signor Caraccioli, a Dominican, who had given up the priesthood for a gospel of atheism and communism. Misson became a convert to Caraccioli's views and they became comrades on a French privateer. When the captain of this vessel was killed in a battle with an English ship, the Italian, who was something of a soap box orator, stepped forward with an eloquent address and a proposal that Misson should become captain. Misson replied with a speech that was even more florid and under this flood of oratory, the volatile French sailors broke forth into cries of "Vive le Capitaine Misson et son Lieutenant le Savant Caraccioli!" and endorsed the election.

The first question that the new officers were called upon to decide was a choice of the flag under which they were to sail. One sailor was so foolish as to propose the dread emblem of piracy, the black flag. This brought forth another flood of oratory from the new lieutenant, filled with references to "Peoples' Rights and Liberties," the "Yoke of Tyranny" and "Oppression and Poverty." Their lives, he declared, unlike the life of a pirate were to be brave and just and innocent and their cause of the Liberty. He suggested a white ensign with the motto "For God and Liberty" on it.

Again the sailors were swept away by the eloquence and with cries of "Liberty! Liberty! We are free men!" and a plentiful supply of "vives" for both men, they ratified the decision. In fact speechmaking and "viving" seem to have been the principal occupation on this strange pirate craft at first and they kept it up as they set out to spread their gospel of sweetness and light and extend their doctrines of freedom to making free with other people's property.

He Wanted a Driver

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

OF COURSE, things would not have started so badly if Sam Warden had had sense enough to stipulate in his advertisement that he wanted a man driver or if Winona Harwood had had sense enough to suppose that a crotchety invalid was a man and not an old lady.

Naturally, when she read the advertisement, "Wanted, at once, careful, patient driver who knows the country well and can do all repairs, for touring with crotchety invalid," she took it for granted that the advertiser was a woman.

Consequently, Winona arrived at Sam Warden's house, in the most optimistic frame of mind as well as a natty driving costume.

She was faced by a large young man who was most evidently suffering the very recent loss of an arm.

He looked at Winona and his brow darkened.

"You're a woman," he stated peevishly.

"I've always thought so," answered Winona sweetly, "and you seem to be a man."

"And didn't my advertisement firmly stipulate that I wanted a man driver?"

"It did not," said Winona, in her turn showing a bit of peevishness, "nor did it state whether you were a man or woman."

Warden smiled dryly.

"Well, now that we are both disappointed, what are you going to do about it?" he asked, and rather wished he might take his tour with Winona as driver. "I rather fancy looking at your back instead of one of those driver's with a cap always set at an angle that irritates me so that I want to give it a kick straight."

Winona let out a peal of laughter and for the first time since his accident Warden did the same.

"To tell you the straight truth," he continued, "I am most frightfully irritable and impatient and I want most of all to get away from these surroundings for awhile and fight out this depression that's got me. The girl I was to marry turned me down when she knew—I—well, one can't blame her. She loves golf and tennis and I'm no good at sports any more. It's a bit rough on a girl to tie up with a one-armed man—"

"I hope," said Winona with a laugh in her voice but something nearer a tear in her eyes, "that when I do fall in love it will not be with a pair of arms."

The second spontaneous laugh fell from Warden's lips. He looked keenly at Winona and he said a bit grimly, "No, I don't think you're the type of girl to throw a man over—once you cared."

Winona turned toward the door. For the first time in her life her heart ached to erase the hurt from a man's eyes.

"Well, since I don't happen to be a man," she said, "and you don't happen to be a lady, I'll have to take another look for someone who wants a driver. But just the same," she added, "I can't see any fair reason why a man won't engage a girl driver when she knows her job as well and sometimes a lot better than a man. Besides, a girl has far more patience with an invalid and—"

"Hey, hold on—who said I wouldn't engage a girl driver? It was you who got peevish because I don't happen to be a lady. I had no idea you would take the job. I seem such a poor spineless specimen now—"

"If you were spineless—you wouldn't have such a strong desire to fight your way to readjustment," Winona said softly. "So if you want me to drive you into a brighter outlook I'm ready any time you want to start. I want you to book me always at hotels as a chauffeur and to treat me as such."

"And you have got to remember that I am a crotchety invalid and must not be crossed too much or I'll get mean and order you all over the place." He seemed already to have started his tour toward the brighter outlook, but Winona said nothing. She felt that he would respond to the call of life and forget that a woman had behaved badly to him before he was half way across the States.

During the following six weeks Winona played the part of a most perfect chauffeur. Never did the personal element enter into the situation. The trip itself was glorious and both Winona and her employer enjoyed the vast grandeur of the mountain roads and the unfolding miles of lovely scenery.

Warden, of course, had known from the very beginning that there was only one road to happiness for him, but he had to keep it all to himself for the time being. When the girl who had turned him down wrote a letter in which she said she had changed her mind and would marry him if he still loved her, Warden wrote back telling her very definitely that the past was past.

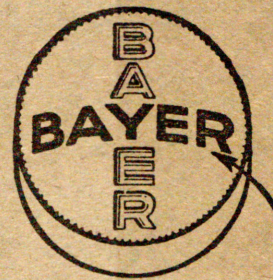

"We're going home by the straightest and quickest road," he told Winona, that day when she appeared ready for the final day that should take them right to the coast.

"Home?" she questioned blankly. "Yes—unless you release me from the promise to look upon you as a burly man with a red mustache and let me behold the woman I love."

"The rest of the trip is the most lovely of all," said Winona softly, "shall we continue?"

Africans Fond of Music

There is no escape from music in Africa. Every native has some sort of musical instrument, bought perhaps from slender wages, but more likely fashioned out of any material close at hand—from 100-gallon oil containers to sun-dried calabashes. And whether the music is made by black man or white man, jazz is just the same in Africa as elsewhere—music which has come winging down the years from its obscure origin in the jungles of the Dark continent.

High Record for Rogers Hornsby

Rogers Hornsby, manager and second baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals, has not only led the National league in batting six straight seasons but has hit .400 and above in three of the last four campaigns.

In 1922 Hornsby turned in a swatting mark of .401, the first time in his big league career he got in the .400 class. In 1923 he fell to .384, only to come back the following season with a .424 average, the greatest ever compiled in modern times.

Last year Hornsby kept up the gait by batting .403, thus hanging up an unusual record.

BASEBALL SQUIBS

Jess Petty, Brooklyn left-hander, continues to pitch sensationally.

Washington has sent pitcher Jimmy Lyle to the Birmingham club of the Southern league on option.

Roy Akin, baseball coach at Trinity university, Waxahachie, Texas, has been signed as a scout by the Cleveland American league club.

Syracuse has obtained infielder Yatz Corrigan from the St. Joseph club of the Western league. He has been doing a utility role in good shape.

The Martinsburg club of the Blue Ridge league has obtained Catcher Thompson from the Scranton club of the New York-Pennsylvania league.

Carl Schmehl continues to play fine ball for the Toronto Leafs. His fielding has made the fans forget all about Gehring, who is now with the Detroit Tigers.

A young outfielder named Shannon, who holds the nickname of "Spike," has been doing fine work for Asheville. His hitting has been close to sensational and his fielding excellent.

Rochester has sent Rube Mallett, young pitcher, to the Macon club of the Sally league, on option, while Henry Thormahlen, left-hander, has been sent to Bridgeport of the Eastern league.

Bryan Johnson, left-handed pitcher, who has been pitching for the Pawnee Indians of Pawnee City, Neb., for the last ten years, has been signed by the Marshalltown club of the Mississippi Valley league.

Lowell of the New England league has obtained Shortstop Joe Prusback from the Jersey City club of the International league, while Mike Dwyer, an outfielder, has been sent on by the Newark club.

Connie Mack will probably carry ten pitchers throughout the season. The Athletic staff was cut to that figure and incidentally to the 25-player limit when Kit May was sent to Reading of the International league.

Use of Color in New Paris Gowns

Pleasing Shades Feature of Winsome Attire—Taffeta in Demand.

Refinement, taste, novelty in detail and an appreciation of color are apparent in the latest fashions, in the absence of anything revolutionary. Color, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times, has intrigued all of the designers and inspired some enchanting costumes. It is the gospel that is being preached by every contributor to the art of dress from the designer of fabrics to the couturier, who establishes a mode of importance. The older masters, and some of those who are swiftly rising this season, create gowns for women of all types and ages and of greater art value than have been shown for many a year. Materials are in themselves a delight, the soft, supple crepes, volles, mousselines; the lustrous silks with pulsating tints and shades. Most of these have already made their place, but this season are shown in countless new variants, finer and more lovely. Taffeta has made such a wide sweep that the demand can scarcely be met, and, in the filmy weaves, mousseline de sole has returned after many years more charming than ever.

All of these are the latest things in fabrics for the evening gowns and wraps that are now presented. Taffeta is used most for the picturesque period gowns of wide skirts with crinolined effects. The softer styles are tremendously popular at the moment, such as the flounced, flaring and petal frocks that are so entrancing in the dance.

Whole groups of this type of gown designed in one mood or another are shown by the Parisian dressmakers. They are particularly happy in models for young women for informal evening frocks, dainty and chic, and in heavenly colors. In one of these models from Nicole Groult, a frock of subtle simplicity is made of pink mousseline de sole, the entire skirt of which from belt to hem is covered with flounces of silk lace dyed in the same shade. The sleeveless bodice, cut in easy blouse lines, has a deep oval décolletage, with tucker of the lace. A soft girle of the mousseline marks a moderately low waistline, and a trailing garniture of roses with long sash ends of the mousseline forms a finish at one side.

Much Lace Is Used.

A great deal of lace is being used on these evening gowns, even Spanish lace, with which Jenny has illustrated a new and altogether interesting treatment. In one of her jeune fille models she has trimmed the skirt with ruffles of the lace gathered as full as ruching and sewn on, row after row. An enchanting little gown designed by a French dressmaker is of light green mousseline de sole. The décolletage, sleeveless bodice is the inevitable straight model, to which the skirt is attached with several rows of shirring. To this is added a flounce of filmy lace in ivory tint, the pattern of which is traced with paint in delicate shades of green, rose and gilt. In a stylish but conventional evening gown from Molyneux two flounces are gathered in straight lines on the skirt of an all-over ecru lace frock over which is worn a sleeveless coat of the same lace.

Black lace is considered extremely smart this season, and in many attractive models is made over a colored lining of crepe or chiffon.

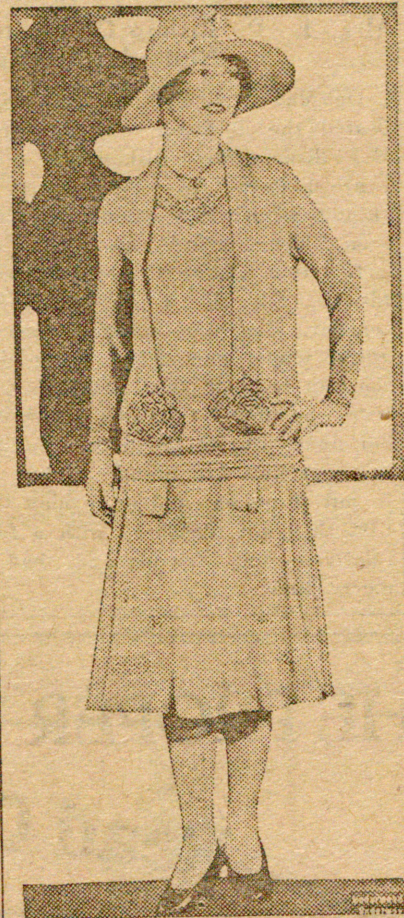

Dainty Afternoon Frock of Apple Green With Wide Gypsy Girdle.

Madeleine des Hayes has made an adorable little frock of unusually sheer black chantilly lace over pale rose crepe. The neck is cut round and rather high, and little narrow ruchings of the lace finish the arm-holes and outline the bottom of the skirt in scallops. In many of the evening gowns of sheer goods the edge of ruffles, folds and skirts is scalloped and one in a new-old idea is trimmed from top to bottom of the skirt with ruffles cut in points, in chiffon that shades from pale to deep rose, having the effect of myriad flower petals. Another dance frock is like a double marigold of yellow tulle, the ruffles gathered full on the outer layer of a triple skirt. These pretty frocks reflect the symbolism of gay gardens and bright fields in intriguing contrast to the all-black which is now the rage.

Black in any and all of the season's fabrics is exceedingly fashionable, but the craze of the moment is for sheer black—chiffon, mousseline de sole, tulle. From almost every house of authority in Paris are received black gowns for evening, and many other charming designs are from American dressmakers.

Jean Patou makes a gown of black crepe de chine, the bodice slightly bloused, the skirt with a cascade of the material on each side, beginning at the belt and dropping low, to form an irregular hemline. Bands of strass passementerie trim the front of the bodice from each shoulder to a deep point over the girdle, making the one brilliant high light. An original little frock from Jenny is entirely of black lace, over black satin, the skirt trimmed from top to bottom with narrow row ruffles of the lace and the long sleeves which are now so fashionable are plain at the top with rows of the lace ruffles covering the space between elbow and wrist.

For Evening Wear.

The bolero in different arrangements, shapes and lengths is shown on many evening gowns, rather more on those of sheer stuffs than on any other. Chanel is going in strong for them, and has presented a stunning creation in black chiffon, one of the few strikingly new designs of the late collections. To the short skirt she has added a long tail of the chiffon, and repeats the line with a pointed bolero swinging from the deep round décolletage neck. The bodice is sleeveless and the gown is untrimmed.

The ensemble idea is presented in some attractive evening costumes in which a wrap is made to match the gown, with slippers, stockings and even a dainty bag and fan of the same color. A late model in ensemble from the des Hayes atelier is done in pale blue crepe Elizabeth embroidered in bands of delicate detail with silver thread and entredeux of silver lace. A long cape of the blue material, made on soft, simple lines, gathered at the neck, with cords to tie, is lined with silver cloth and trimmed around the bottom with deep points of silver lace. Slippers of silver and blue brocade and stockings of the laciest blue chiffon, are to be worn with this costume, and a fan of pale blue silk edged with a line of silver is painted in a pretty scene.

New Styles in Wraps.

There are countless new styles in evening wraps, those best liked on this side at this season being of crepe, taffeta and other light fabrics in contrast to the richer velvet manteaux. Fur is still used even on the spring and summer models, but in those varieties known, paradoxically, as "summer fur."

A wrap of a most lovely shade of green known by various names, one of which—leaf green—seems best to describe it, is of bengaline lined with crepe de chine, with a collar of the material shirred and padded into a roll shape and with a bottom trimming of baby skunk. This bottom band is not new, but has apparently a tenacious hold on fashion life. Another wrap in sea green has a collar of white fox dyed in the same shade. Quilted taffeta is much used in some of the new wraps, and in all of the latest coats and wraps from Parisian houses taffeta is given much attention in detail of needlework, stitching and tucking. In some of the most important evening costumes that come from the other side, scarfs are worn as wraps with evening gowns. This has inspired a number of new styles of scarf to be used in this way. One is a reflection of the Spanish shawl, with the large conventional floral pattern printed on a long, wide scarf of chiffon or thin crepe. These are showy, colorful affairs, with the flowers reproduced in brilliant colors on the most fragile fabrics. Shawls of fine crepe in plain white and light colors are trimmed with deep silk fringe, on which the design is printed, and other evening scarfs of sheer stuff are effectively hand-painted with traceries of gilt.

Europeans Slow to Take to Chocolate

A forgotten centenary has recently been fished up by a French scientific historian, Raoul Lecoq. As he made his deputation by studying vitamins, he pays attention to the medical value first attached to his present subject—chocolate.

It is now 400 years since the Spaniards brought it back from Mexico, which they had just conquered. They made it then as they do now—"thick enough for the spoon to stand straight up in the cup." A hundred years later Richelieu's brother, the archbishop of Lyons, "was the first to use the drug in France." He said it was good for his spleen.

In England, on Tuesday, June 16, 1657, the London Public Advertiser announced: "In Bishopgate street, in Queen's head alley—at a Frenchman's house—is an excellent West India drink, called chocolate, to be sold." And soon American girls were swallowing it, to the great indignation of the survivors of the first Puritan colonists.

Indian Learned to "Talk"

It never occurred to me before to "make" conversation. Among themselves, Indians speak seldom and then only when they have something important to say. They never talk just to be talking. And now I saw for the first time that there was a different custom among white men.

I started at once to change all this in my own makeup. I began to make talk consciously—little talk about little things. Now—ten years' later—it comes natural for me to converse, but I had to learn how to do it just as I had to learn how to read English or tie a white man's tie.—Chief Long Lance, in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.

Cleaning Sewing Machine

Kerosene serves well to clean the sewing machine bearings when they are clogged and dirty. It is used by putting it into the oil holes and running the machine for a few moments. Then, since kerosene is really a cleanser, but not a lubricant, great care must be used to get it all out by flushing with machine oil.

The Analyst

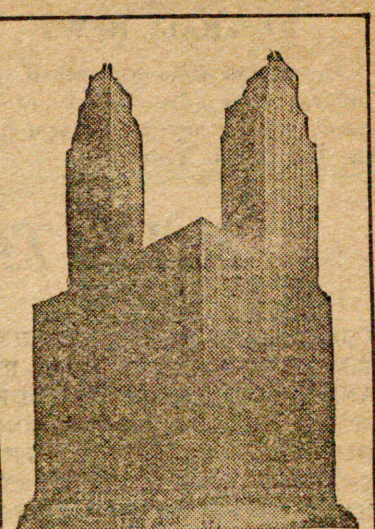

Count Leo Tolstol, the Russian sculptor, said at a New York reception:

"Psycho-analysis is the ugliest and silliest fad of modern times. A lot of novelists have taken it up, but how my father would have hated it!"

"Psycho-analysis analyzes the finest things and proves everything to be ugly. It's like the professor whose wife burst into tears when he refused her a summer holiday in Europe."

"Ah, my friend," he said to her, "tears are useless. I have analyzed them. They contain a little phosphate of lime, some chloride of sodium, oxygen, hydrogen, and that's all."

She is a former school teacher, champion speller, famous guitar player and singer. Even now she can perform the physical culture bending exercises, touching her finger tips to the floor. Church Council Notes

The church council has been real active in the past few months. We are glad to report to the members at this time that we have been successful in paying $1,000 on our church debt. This leaves us an indebtedness of $20,000. We acknowledge with thanks the following donations: Ladies Aid, $500; Young People, $100; Brotherhood, $300; $100 bond turned over to the church council by one of our church members. This makes a total of $1,000.
If anyone wishes to turn over church bonds to the church board it will be greatly appreciated by all.

The Booster has examined the Pledge book and found that the amount of unpaid pledges is still $4,079.10. Now, if every one who has not paid his pledge would pay as much as possible we easily could eliminate our church debt to $16,- 000. What do you say? Let us give this matter our foremost consideration, and let us do our bit to liquidate our church debt.

Our Brotherhood

A very interesting meeting, with 31 present, was held in the church basement on the last Monday in April. The pastor opened the meeting with prayer and scripture reading, after which he gave a very interesting talk on "Pre-Adamitism."

The topic led into a lively discussion and every one was anxious to get acquainted with the relatives of Cain's wife. Three new members were added to our Brotherhood:
Albert Strassenburg, George Keuch and Andrew Jahraus. It was unanimously decided to have our annual Brotherhood picnic on the third Saturday in June. All members were initiated and a fine lunch was served after the business meeting.

The following committees were appointed by the executive board for the Brotherhood picnic:

Parking—Herman Woodrich, Andrew Cappel, Steve Nemith.

Baseball—Charles Erickson, Albert Cappel, Lawrence Kohl.

Advertising—Rev. W. Cramer,
W. Semmler.

Donations—W. Lauffeur, John Mattes, W. Cramer.

Ways and Means—Milton Krapp,
Elmer Cappel, Emil Keuch, Fred Yunker, Nic Yunker.

Picnic Stands—Albert Braun, Fred Hinspeter, Fred Cappel.

Sports and Games—Emil Krapp, Henry Schoeneck, William Keuch, George Barnes, Emil Cappel, Emmanuel Marti, John Cappel.

Supper—John Mattes, Carl
Krapp, Charles Eggers, Ernest Lehnert, Edward Marti.

Music and Entertainment—Leon Tonn.

Cashiers—Milton Krapp, Charles Erickson, Ona McGoveny.

Selecting committees for the picnic is a big job, but the Booster hopes that the committees turn over a bigger job. The picnic will be held in Cappel's grove on the 19th day of June. Let us make this a red letter day for our Brotherhood. Toot-toot, all aboard! Next stop—Cappel's grove! Bring your umbrella and your pocketbook and the family, too!

Our Ladies' Aid

Seventy members and visitors were present at the May meeting.
Mrs. Rose Bechstein read the Scripture and Mrs. Rose Knudsen the monthly topic. Mrs. Lizzie Back of Manhattan joined our Ladies' Aid society. The Booster extends a heartly welcome to you and hopes that you, too, will become an active member of the L. A. S. The Ladies' Aid supper given in the last week of April was a success. The net profit amounted to $125.56; the net profit of the bunco party, $20; the total net profit amounting to $145.56. The prizes for the bunco party were donated by the following ladies: Mrs.
Mall, Mrs. Andrew Cappel and Mrs.
McMahon. In this column again we mention the gift of $500 the Ladies' Aid turned over to the trustees of the church to liquidate the church debt. Many, many thanks to our busy ladies, who are working hard for the Kingdom of God. May God bless you in your efforts and in due time we shall reap if we faint not. We also wish to thank all the ladies who have helped to make the supper and bunco party a success and those who have donated prizes.
Very fine! Some day the Booster will hand you a big bouquet. The following ladies celebrated their birthday and were in a fitting manner congratulated by the president:
Mrs. Emil Krapp, Mrs. Sutter, Mrs.
Keuch, Mrs. Andrew Cappel, Mrs.
Emil Cappel, Mrs. Carl Krapp,
Mrs. Felix, Mrs. Olson, Mrs. Fred Yunker. The Booster also wishes to congratulate you and wishes you many more happy birthdays. Coffee receipts amounted to $20.50, dues $6.50. Total amount in the treasury, $63.82.

Our Sunday School

Sunday, April 25, attendance, 108; collections, $6.75.

Sunday, May 2, attendance, 101;
collections, $5.90.

Sunday, May 9, attendance, 111;
collections, $6.34.

Sunday, May 16, attendance, 127;
collections, $7.56.

Our Young People

Our young people are working hard getting ready for the play,
"The Old District School," to be given on Friday, June 25. Folks, don't fail to see the spanking machine! We assure you two hours of continuous laughter. Bring a half-dozen handkerchiefs to wipe your tears. Come and see Ezekiel Simpkins, the teacher, who licks the overgrown kids; how Daniel Webster turns the mouse loose, and listen to Deacon Tidd's powerful speech on education and see the rest of the comical kids pulling off stunts on the teacher. Reserve your seats early! Get your tickets now!

The wiener roast on Thursday evening, May 20, was largely attended by the young people and all had a glorious, grand old time. In the last business meeting the young people voted to give $100 toward the new church. Many thanks! Let us have another $100 if you have it.
It was decided to buy a new curtain for the stage. This matter was left to the pastor, and we hope that he buys a good one. On Sunday, June 6, all young people will attend the Young People's federation services at Peotone. Your pastor will deliver the sermon in the evening service. Let us all go! All young people will meet at the church at 1:15
p. m. sharp. The Booster hopes that a large delegation of the Mokena young people will attend this annual affair. Let us be real Evangelical and show our colors.

weekly at the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

The proceeds of the minstrel show has just been announced as

A "live wire" business meeting was held in the church basement Sunday afternoon. This was for the purpose of making arrangements for the second annual Independence Day picnic. Monday July 5th, was the day agreed upon.
Committees were appointed. Mr.
E. Cowan was elected general chairman. Keen interest was shown by all present. One hundred dollars, to be expended in prizes, was donated. Also promise of many lovely articles to be used on the one ticket, were made. Just watch for those tickets. Tentative plans for the big chicken dinner were made by the women present (although the men would come in on this discussion). Races, dancing, music, games and refreshments were spoken of. It will be a real Fourth of

G. M. Peterson States

Needs of the Village

Sewerage and drainage are the vital issues at present according to G. M. Peterson who was approached by a member of the Booster staff in regard to village needs. "There are many places where the drainage is blocked, and now is the time to attend to it. The work can be done with little trouble at present, where as later it would be much more complicated and much more expensive. A village hall and jail are also needed," says Mr. Peterson.
"We have a building fund; why not use it occasionally for building purposes? Many of the speeders and drunks held by the village cop are irresponsible and unable to furnish bonds. A temporary place of detention would help considerably; in fact," Mr. Peterson thinks that "a padded cell would be about right for some of the culprits." These are the needs at present thinks ex-trustee Peterson, and the Booster would be glad to hear from others. Address letters to Community Booster, Worth, Ill., or hand

POINTS ON KEEPING WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

SWIMMING POOL SANITATION

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY sang of the "Ol' Swimmin' Hole" which our fathers and grandfathers used to enjoy. When it is possible, there is nothing that equals a natural, outdoor pool, whether in river, lake or pond. But this is, in most localities, a thing of the past. Our streams have been polluted and, with the filling up of the land and the clearing away of forests, the water supply has been so reduced that only those living near a great river or a large lake can hope to enjoy a nature-made swimming place.

Even in those lucky places where there are still natural swimming pools available, they can only be used during a part of the year. So there is a growing tendency to build artificial swimming pools, either indoor or out. Present-day concrete construction makes this comparatively easy. So that, today, practically all our colleges, many of our high schools and even some grammar schools are being equipped with swimming pools, while cities and parks are building them with increasing frequency. In a recent bulletin of the Iowa state department of health it is stated that, in 1925 alone, over four hundred outdoor swimming pools were built.

Many suggestions might be made as to the construction and management of these pools. But one thing, most important, should always be insisted on. They must be clean. The possibility of disease transmission in a pool in which hundreds and sometimes thousands of people bathe in a single day is too great to take any chance.

There are a number of diseases which may be transmitted from one person to another through common use of a swimming pool. Naturally, any person with a plainly marked case of any infection should not be allowed in a public pool. Any person with a plain case of any skin disease should also be barred. But many persons may be apparently healthy and yet carry on their body or in some of the body discharges germs which may produce disease in others. Not all germs which come from the body are harmful, in fact, many are harmless. But every bather before going into the pool should be required to take a warm bath and the water in the pool should be frequently changed, filtered and, if necessary, subjected to purification by means of ultra-violet light, copper sulphate, calcium hypochlorite or chlorine.

MAKING A FINGER FROM A TOE

EVERYBODY knows that our present-day surgical methods make it possible to do things to the human body which would have been considered miracles fifty years ago. Yet few realize the almost unlimited possibilities of the future. Ten years ago, Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute, in a public talk, said that the day might come when every city would have an anatomical cold storage warehouse, in which would be preserved, in a condition of suspended animation, the arms, legs, toes and fingers of the healthy persons who have been killed by accident, just as spare automobile parts are now kept in machine shops; and that a man or woman who had lost a hand or foot, arm or leg by accident would go to this warehouse, pick out a missing part to suit them, and have it grafted in position.

We have not yet reached the point where this is possible, but we're on our way. In a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, a New York surgeon reported a case in which he mended a man's hand by grafting a little toe onto a middle finger, with perfect results.

The patient, a working man of thirty, while operating a bread-cutting machine, sliced off a third of the middle finger of his right hand. As the cut was clean and fresh, the surgeon proposed grafting a toe on in place of the finger. The patient consented. The man was put to sleep and a cut made through the upper part of the right little toe, through the joint, leaving the toe attached to the foot by the skin and tendons of the under side of the toe. The edges of the cut finger were then freshened and the toe and finger brought together and sewed together. Adhesive plaster and bandages held the hand and foot so neither could be moved. At the end of two weeks, the edges of the finger and the toe had grown together. The under flap, which held the toe to the foot, was then cut, freeing the toe from the foot and liberating the hand. The two cut edges of the finger and toe were then sewed together.

Healing took place without any infection, and the man now has a perfect hand. The little toe is of practically no use and its absence does not show. The man now has a hand which looks perfect and the fingers are all the same length, making it possible for him to do any kind of work. Even more extensive repairs on the body are now possible. It is only a matter of working out practical methods. What the future may hold, no one knows.

SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPER

Dishes which may be prepared beforehand, or better, served from the chafing dish, are always popular for the Sunday night meal.

Scrambled Eggs.—If limited in the number of eggs and oversupplied with those who are to be served, to make a dish of scrambled eggs extend to meet the appetites, add to the frying pan a half cupful of rice that has been well washed and drained, add enough butter to cook it, stirring until the rice is a good color, then add water or milk or a mixture of both and cook the rice until perfectly well done. Now add three to four eggs, more if more rice is used, and with the usual milk or cream and butter with seasonings one has a most satisfying dish, saving one-half of the eggs ordinarily used for such a dish.

Jellied Chicken Salad.—Put into a saucepan three cupfuls of highly seasoned chicken stock, the whites of two eggs, three tablespoonfuls of gelatin and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Boil two minutes, stirring constantly. Place on the back of the range for thirty minutes then strain through a double cheesecloth.

Cover the bottom of individual molds with liquid jelly and set on ice. When firm, decorate with red and green peppers cut into fancy shapes; cover with the jelly mixture. Moisten one cupful of cooked fowl with one-half cupful of mayonnaise dressing to which a teaspoonful of dissolved gelatin has been added. Shape into balls and put a ball in each mold; fill with the jelly. Chill, unfold on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

English Monkey.—Soak one cupful of stale bread crumbs in one cupful of milk until soft. Melt one tablespoonful of butter, add a cupful of soft cheese and when the cheese is melted add the soaked crumbs, one egg slightly beaten, salt and cayenne to taste. Cook three minutes and pour over toasted crackers or toasted bread and sprinkle with paprika.

Onion Sandwiches.—Chop fine a few slices of southern onion, add salt, pepper, a little olive oil or salad dressing, a dash of lemon juice, mix and spread on well-buttered bread, add a leaf of lettuce and cover with another slice of buttered bread.

Rice With Bananas.—Peel and scrape three well ripened bananas and mash them with a fork until creamy, add a few drops of lemon juice, stir lightly into one cupful of cooked rice and serve with cream and sugar.

Treasured Recipes.

A French preparation for soup seasoning which is considered very choice is this:

Two ounces each of sweet marjoram, parsley and savory, thyme and lemon peel, and one ounce of sweet basil. The herbs are dried and ground, then all are sifted together until well mixed. This powder, if carefully bottled and corked, will keep for years. Use it sparingly.

Ever-Lasting Yeast.—The three dry yeast cakes in a cheese cloth, add one quart of potato water, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and let stand twelve hours. Remove the yeast and place in a glass jar well covered but not sealed. Use one cupful of the yeast for six loaves of bread. Once or twice a week fill the jar with cooled potato water, using the same amount of liquid as the amount of yeast removed each time. If not enough yeast is used each time take out some each time the potato water is added. This will keep for years as the potato water keeps nourishing new yeast buds.

Olive Oil Pickles.—Cucumber pickles are a bit early yet but it is well to have the recipes ready when the time comes. Take one hundred small cucumbers, three pints of small onions, one pint of olive oil, one ounce each of celery seed and white pepper, one-fourth pound of white mustard seed. Slice the unpeeled cucumbers, cover with one and two-thirds cupfuls of salt, let stand three hours. Slice onions, let stand in cold water to cover, drain and mix all together with spices and oil, pack in jars and fill the jars with good vinegar. Seal and keep very cold.

Mustard Pickles.—To a gallon of vinegar add one-half cupful of mustard, one cupful of salt, and two cupfuls of brown sugar. Drop the young cucumbers into the jar as they are gathered and washed each day. When the jar is full cover with horseradish leaves. They will be good to eat in two weeks.

A half cupful of cooked oat meal added to a small beef loaf improves it and adds bulk. When making oatmeal cookies or rocks, brown and grind the oatmeal; it makes a very different flavor and texture.

HIGHER THAN WOOLWORTH BUILDING

The Yearly Sales of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Woolworth Building in New York City, which towers 792 feet above the street, is our highest building.

If all the bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sold in one year could be placed end to end, they would make a column as high as the Woolworth Building. And there would be enough left over to extend from Lynn, Massachusetts to Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have lots of work to do and I am not very strong, but I was getting worse all the time until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to lose my appetite completely at certain times, but I feel very well since I began taking this medicine. I think so much of it that I would go before a notary and swear to its merits. You could step into my home any time and you will find a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. FRANK M. CASEY, 220 South 11th Ave., Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Countess Cathcart, at a dinner party in New York, discussed without bitterness the failure of her play, "Ashes," in both New York and London.

"My play wasn't shocking enough," she said. "Nowadays men want such shocking plays, don't they? A man said to me the other night:

"You women only go to church to see what other women have got on." "And you men," said I, "only go to the theater to see what we've left off."

GRAFTING GIRDLED TREES IS PROPER

Girdled fruit trees should be grafted if they are to be saved, according to advice from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. As the snow melts from the orchard, the damage which mice and rabbits have done to young trees will be evident, and these trees can be saved to future usefulness if care is used in bridge-grafting.

The college has already pointed out that scions should be from well-matured water sprouts of the preceding summer's growth or from vigorous terminal growth. The grafting itself is best done at about the time of delayed dormant spraying when the buds are showing green. At this time the bark should peel easily.

"Prepare the trunk of the girdled tree for bridge-grafting by removing sections of bark above and below the wound as nearly equal to the diameter of the scion as possible, and about two or three inches long," says the college. "In removing these sections of bark, the cuts should be deep enough to remove all tissue down to the transparent film which covers the hard sapwood and constitutes the growing layer. Make the scion somewhat longer than the wound to be covered, and bevel it on each end with a straight cut of such a length as will fit into the incision made in the bark."

"Nail the scion to the trunk in the places where the sections of bark have been removed. Each end of the scion can be held in place by two number eighteen wire nails, an inch long. The more scions placed about the wound, the quicker it will heal, but generally they are placed about an inch and a half apart. After the scions have been nailed in place they are waxed at each end with grafting wax in order to prevent their drying out and decay."

The college of agriculture at Ithaca has several good recipes for wax, as well as directions for grafting, and these will be furnished on request.

Currents, Gooseberries

and Strawberry Crops

Strawberries are usually planted about 18 inches apart in rows 4 feet apart for June-fruiting varieties and 1 foot apart in rows of 3 feet apart for everbearing varieties; currents and gooseberries, 6 by 6 feet; red raspberries, 18 inches apart in rows 6 feet apart; other raspberries 3 feet apart in rows 6 feet apart; grapes 8 feet.

Care should be exercised in setting strawberries not to get them too deep or to have any portion of the roots exposed. The crown should be just even with the surface of the soil. All other small fruits are planted a few inches deeper than they stood when in the nursery rows. Clean cultivation should be given throughout the spring months. It is more convenient and will lessen the work to mulch around the bush and cane fruits during the summer and fall months and in the strawberry bed the second summer, using the same material that was used for the winter mulch. No cultivation is given the strawberry the second year.

Better Pruning Needed

for Quality in Fruit

Much more attention must be paid to pruning than is customary, if the quality of fruit is to be improved, in the opinion of W. A. Ruth, associate chief of pomological physiology at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. By intelligent pruning it is possible to improve the size and color of fruit and indirectly to lessen insect and fungous injury by facilitating spraying, he pointed out. The best type of pruning throughout the entire life of a tree consists almost altogether in the removal of excess branches. Heading back should be practiced sparingly and only under special conditions which definitely call for it.

It is frequently necessary to remove large branches from older trees under our present orchard practices. This is inadvisable because it usually results eventually in the death of the tree. To prevent this the tree should be trained in its first two or three years preferably to the modified central leader type.

Spray for Insects

Fruit growers are urged to apply the delayed dormant spray to fruit trees. This is the first spray of the season and should be applied early in the spring. In spraying peaches this spray should be applied just before the buds swell. This spray may be delayed and will be most effective if applied to apples just as green can be seen in the tips of the buds.

Horticultural Notes

Many small farm vineyards have been put out in the last four or five years, and there is room for more.

The spray pump used should be strong enough to break the spray materials into a fine mist so that every part of the tree or bush is covered but not soaked as though the spray was thrown at the tree.

Chlorinated Lime Loses Strength

Use of Seriously Deteriorated Article Is Declared Bad Practice.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Chlorinated lime, also known as "bleaching powder," and sometimes incorrectly called "chloride of lime," a substance used extensively as a germicide, deodorant, and bleaching agent, loses its strength with age, eventually becoming ineffective as a germicide, says the United States Department of Agriculture. An investigation has been made by the department for the purpose of determining the rate of deterioration of chlorinated lime, and the results of the study have been published in Department Bulletin 1389, entitled "Deterioration of Commercially Packed Chlorinated Lime."

Only a Waste of Money.

The use of seriously deteriorated chlorinated lime for germicidal purposes, not only is a waste of money, but, by affording a false security, causes other precautions to be omitted and serious injury to health may result.

The investigation disclosed no marked difference in rate of deterioration between samples manufactured and packed in winter and those put up in summer. There was, however, a seasonal variation, the loss of available chlorine being greater in warm than in cold weather. This loss seems to be slightly accelerated by light.

The results on the rate of deterioration as influenced by the method of packing, whether by hand or machine, did not lead to any definite conclusions, and the keeping qualities of the bleaching powder were not greatly affected by the type and size of commercial container.

Average Loss of Chlorine.

The average loss of available chlorine for all samples from the different sources, packed and stored in various ways, was 1.08 per cent a month for the period, 12 to 15 months. Most of the available chlorine lost was transformed into chloride chlorine, the loss in total chlorine in most cases and the change in chlorate chlorine being very slight. A copy of the bulletin, which gives many details relative to the investigation, may be obtained free, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Conifers Are Best for

Tree Planting on Farm

Conifer, or evergreen, trees grow faster and more thickly than do the hardwoods, such as hard maple, white ash, basswood, and the like. This, according to the forestry department of the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, is the reason why the state conservation commission grows coniferous seedlings almost exclusively, and recommends their general use in reforestation.

Landowners who are familiar with the rapid growth made in their woodlots by valuable hardwoods frequently raise the question why more effort is not directed toward planting these species. Foresters recognize the value of such species, but contrast the rapid and sure growth of the conifers and the ease with which they are raised in seed beds.

Likewise, the department points out, hardwoods are not likely to flourish in the exposed sites where tree planting is to be done. The conifers, on the other hand, are able to thrive under such adverse conditions as stony soils and bare pastures, and soon establish a forest floor. They will convert a bare, bleak pasture into a woodland in a shorter time than would any of the hardwoods. In fact, the foresters declare the gross quantity production from a stand of pine in fifty years may be double that from hardwood growth.

Real Value of Bull Is

Very Often Overlooked

Unfortunately some of the best bulls of the dairy breeds have been slaughtered before their real value was determined. The real test of a bull is the individuality and production of his daughters and the bull is usually at least three or four years old before this can be accurately determined. It is a big mistake to use a bull two years and then sell him. A simple exchange of bulls with a neighbor or fellow breeder will keep the bulls in service at least four years and available until their value as sires is determined. Another excellent plan which makes for the purchase of better bulls is the co-operative use of a bull by neighbors.

Eliminate Dirt in Milk

by Exercising Caution

Clipping the long hair from the udders and wiping with a damp cloth before milking will do a great deal to eliminate dirt in the milk. The small-top milk pail will also eliminate more trouble. Even with the best of care, some dirt will get into the milk, and this should be removed immediately after milking by passing the milk through a strainer which is equipped with a cotton filter instead of the usual wire or cheesecloth strainer. The cotton pads will pick up the fine dust that will pass through the ordinary strainer. A few trials with a sediment tester will show the efficiency of the device as compared to the usual method of straining.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

POLAR BEARS IN SUMMER

"They say that we are very cross," remarked Mr. Polar Bear.

"I believe they speak correctly," answered Mrs. Polar Bear, as she shook her big head up and down and looked at Mr. Polar Bear.

"They say you are even more cross than I am," Mr. Polar Bear continued.

"That, too, is quite true, I believe," said Mrs. Polar Bear.

"It's a very hot day," said Mr. Polar Bear after a moment.

"It's a horrid day," said Mrs. Polar Bear, "and if I could get hold of the keeper I would tell him so."

"You mean," said Mr. Polar Bear, "you would go after him and goodness only knows what would become of him."

"Goodness wouldn't know, but I would," said Mrs. Polar Bear, her eyes looking very wild. "I would put a finish to him for making the day so hot."

"I don't believe it is his fault," said Mr. Polar Bear. "Then, too, he has tried to do his best for us. He has been giving us cake after cake of ice."

"Up North from where we came we can live on ice. What do little cakes of ice mean to me?" asked Mrs. Polar Bear.

"Besides I would like to get rid of some of my bad temper on the keeper. I don't care whether it is his fault or not. You're much milder than I am, Mr. Polar."

"It's foolish of you, too. I like to be considered a terror. I like to hear the keeper tell people that he can't make pets of the polar bears, and especially Mrs. Polar Bear."

"Yes, as I said before, we are cross," Mr. Polar Bear remarked. "But I think you are a little harsh on the keeper. Think how much hotter we would be if he didn't give us all this

"It's a Horrid Day," said Mrs. Polar Bear.

Ice! And, too, while other animals are enjoying the heat, think how we get the better of them when it is cold, cold winter."

"I never think of the winter in the summer, Mr. Polar," said Mrs. Polar.

"When it's hot I complain and I don't try to think of the cool days to come. Otherwise I'd be too patient—and patience isn't my strong point."

"But I'll tell you a secret," she added, as she played with another piece of ice the keeper gave her.

Mr. Polar Bear was cooling himself upon his piece of ice, and Mrs. Polar looked at him as she spoke.

"You have a secret to tell me?" asked Mr. Polar.

"Yes," said Mrs. Polar. "I will tell it to you. We're not very friendly at best—indeed we're far from it."

"We don't like the zoo much, especially when it is warm."

"We like the very far north where it is always cold and where even the little cub babies go into the icy water."

"But this is my secret, and it is the secret of many other Mrs. Polar Bears who live in zoos."

"We will not let any little polar babies come to the zoo. They are very seldom born in captivity—and none have ever been born here."

"I don't want the little ones to be brought up in this small space."

"I don't want them to have the hot summers."

"I don't want them to be captive."

"And that is my secret. It is part of my revenge on the zoo people."

"Now and again a Mrs. Polar Bear feels different. But not often."

"So that is the secret!" said Mr. Polar Bear. "Well, you're a wild one, all right."

"But here comes still more ice. That keeper is doing his best for us on this hot day."

"No more than he should do," said Mrs. Polar Bear, in a sad, sad voice.

Home, Sweet Home

"Darn it," growled Johnnie, "I'll be glad when I grow up and get away from fool teachers who keep you in after school."

"Ho!" replied Willie, who came from that kind of a home, "about that time you'll be marrying a wife who'll keep you in at night."

Lesson for June 6

JACOB AND ESAU

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 33:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephes. 4:32.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Brothers Make Up a Quarrel.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Esau Forgives Jacob.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Brotherly Love and Forgiveness. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Lesson in Reconciliation.

I. Their Birth (25:21-26).

In answer to Isaac's prayer, seed was given unto him. Before the children were born God revealed unto Rebekah the fact that the elder should serve the younger. God reversed the ordinary law concerning the position of the elder son.

II. Esau Sells His Birthright (25:27-33).

1. It was right that Jacob should have the birthright and the blessing, for it was according to God's plan which had been preannounced, but his scheme to get them is to be condemned. He took advantage of a brother's weakness to drive a sharp bargain.

2. Esau the profane (Heb. 12:16, 17).

Many think that profanity is only swearing, but swearing is not the most common profanity. To be under the sway of appetite is to be a profane person. Esau was a supreme example. He sold his birthright for a bowl of pottage. This birthright was the right of being at the head of the patriarchal family, a position of honor and influence, as well as being the inheritor of a double portion of the father's estate. This being a gift of God, it should not be despised. In the moment of his distress he thought only of that which would bring him some carnal satisfaction. He was willing to relinquish all claims on the future if only his present desire could be gratified. A profane person, therefore, is one who for the enjoyment of the present will forfeit all claims upon the future.

III. Jacob Secures the Blessing (Gen. 27).

1. Esau requested to get venison for his father (vv. 1-4).

Isaac loved Esau because of his venison (Gen. 25:23). He ought to have loved him because he was his son. It is a sad commentary upon a father that his love for his son had such a sordid basis as that of his stomach.

2. Rebekah's scheme (vv. 5-33).

God had said to her that the elder should serve the younger. It was His plan that Jacob should be at the head, but God was able to bring His own plans to pass.

3. Esau's remorseful cry (vv. 34-36). When he came to realize that he had not only lost his birthright but the blessing, his conscience smote him and he earnestly begged for a blessing, even seeking it with bitter tears.

IV. Jacob Meets Esau (Gen. 33:1-11).

1. As a result of Jacob's cunning and deceit he was obliged to flee from home to save his life. In spite of his selfishness and sin God appeared to him at Bethel.

2. Prayer for deliverance from Esau's wrath (32:9-12).

He was about to meet his brother, whom he had wronged some twenty years before.

(1) He made his plea on the basis of God's covenant. Jacob came in line with the Abrahamic covenant, so he had a right to plead that relationship.

(2) He pleaded that he was in God's way. We should assure ourselves that we are going according to God's will, then make our pleas before Him on that ground.

(3) He made a definite plea. He told God plainly of his danger. He said, "Deliver me from the hand of my brother."

3. The angel wrestles with Jacob (32:22-30).

Observe that it was not Jacob wrestling with the angel, but the angel wrestling with Jacob. Jacob did not get the blessing because he wrestled, but he was not blessed until he had been crippled and in his helplessness clung to God.

4. Jacob gets a new name (32:27-30).

This experience at the ford of Jabbok wrought a mighty change in Jacob. "Jacob" with his cunning and deceit was left behind and "Israel," a prince with God, entered the land.

V. Esau and Jacob Reconciled (33:1-11).

At Jabbok Jacob got right with God, so now he easily got right with Esau. It is easy to get right with our brother after getting right with God.

MOKENA

Sunday mid-night Elmer Cooper Mokena garage man, received a telephone call to pull in an auto wreck at the cemetery hill south of Mokena. Upon arriving on the scene of the accident, he found that the driver of a Ford Sedan had piled up in the ditch on the left side of the road. The car was headed south. The driver who appeared to be under the influence of moonshine told a conflicting story of being ditched by bright lights from a car approaching in the opposite direction, but the fact that his car was on the left hand side of the road, would hardly bear out the story. The car was reduced to a pile of junk by the crash and was hauled away in a truck the next morning. The driver was only slightly hurt.

Ralph Hacker and Betty Wallace of Joliet were married in that city Wednesday.

Fred Cappel had his dairy herd tested Thursday and lost 27 head out of 32 head.
